

Felton Road Central Otago, New Zealand

FELTON ROAD

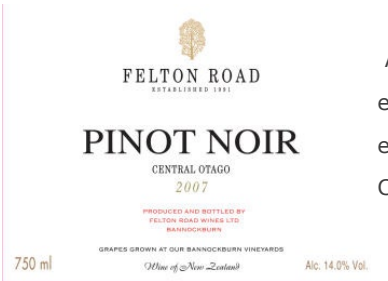

Felton Road is located in Bannockburn, Central Otago in New Zealand, the most southerly wine growing region in the World. Here, vineyards are nestled into small microclimates totally surrounded by high mountains, many of which are snowcapped all year round.

2007 Chardonnay

Grilled bread, citrus and a hint of white peach are apparent on the nose. Rich and viscous yet at the same time refreshingly crisp, the palate is one of the most harmoniously balanced we have seen in our chardonnay: cream textured citrus in a frame of hazelnut and minerals. Finishes with good persistence, clean and very pure.

2007 Pinot Noir

A very floral, perfumed, classic Pinot Noir nose: fruit, violets, spice and bramble, with nothing in excess. Creamy and weighty across the mid-palate, very flowing, almost juicy sweetness with just enough dusty tannins kicking in to complement a dark finish with hints of espresso and chocolate. Complete, complex and perhaps close to the ultimate expression for a Felton Road Pinot Noir

2007 Cornish Point Pinot Noir

The nose is fairly closed this early in the wine's life, but it is already clear that it will brim with violets, exotic spice and rich florals as the wine settles down. The palate is deep, viscous and voluptuous, with dark cherry, blackberry leaf and raspberry notes. The finish adds sweet chocolate and mocha to the mix with a touch of chewy tree sap and toast. Simply gorgeous: everything we love about Cornish Point.

2007 Calvert Pinot Noir

Bright and vibrant, the wine has vivid florals, cherry and plum on the nose and a crystalline palate of pure, red cherry and spices with excellent drive. The finish contrasts with a persistence of ripe cherry chocolate and dusty tannins. Silky, yet without a hint of heaviness, this wine displays the classic Calvert character of elegance and energy.
